

Where are you in your HR Career?

#improving HR

When we're in the pressure cooker of HR, it can be hard to think of our career
as a journey...

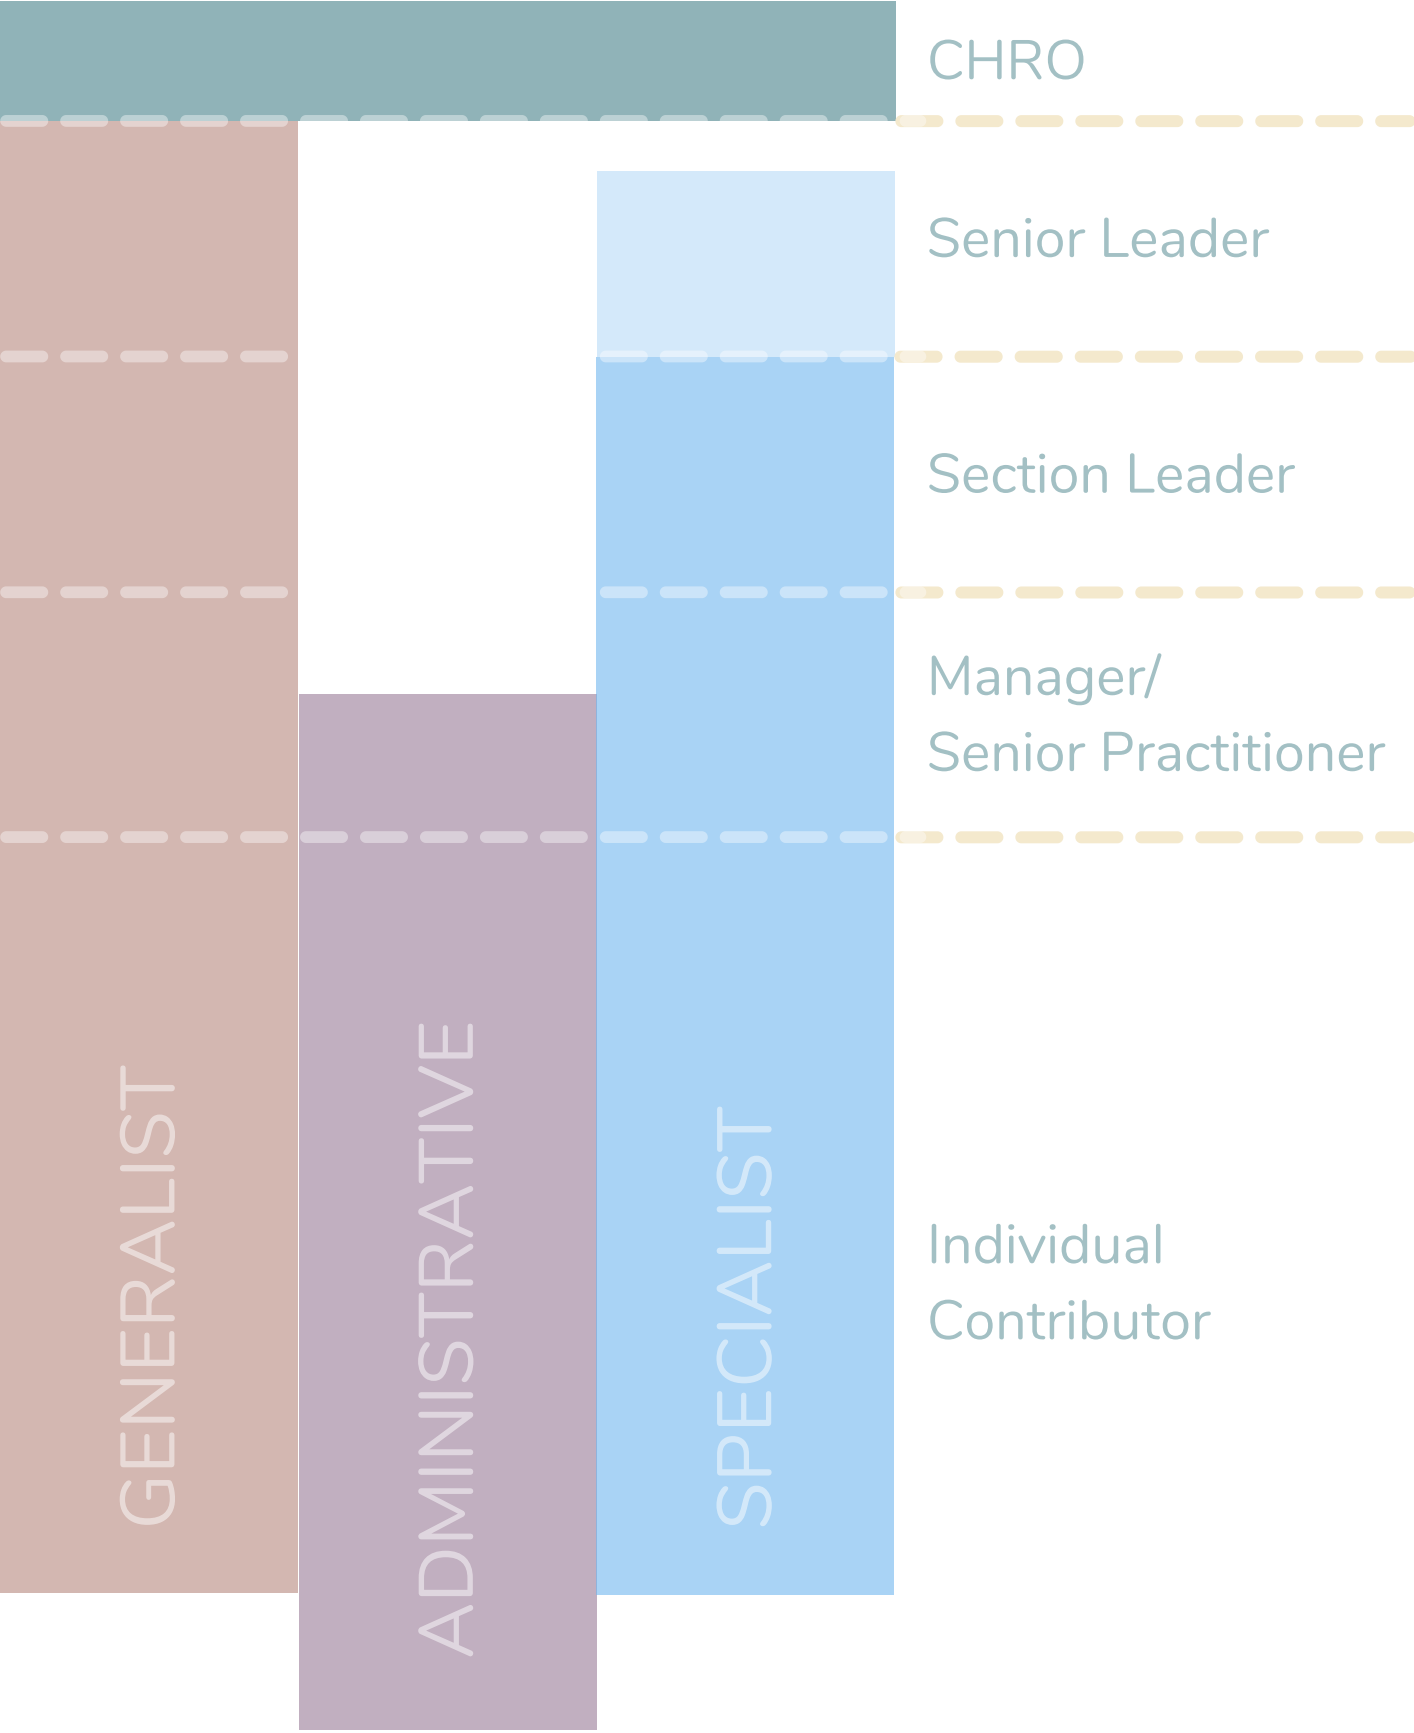

And we can end up
dashing from role
to role...

[Or from fire-fight to fire-fight]

It's always a good thing to step back,
and take stock

Here's a simple structural model
for HR careers

[and, yes, there will always be outliers,
but go with it for the moment, OK?]

Now, plot the major events of your career so far and connect them with a line

Here's mine, for example...

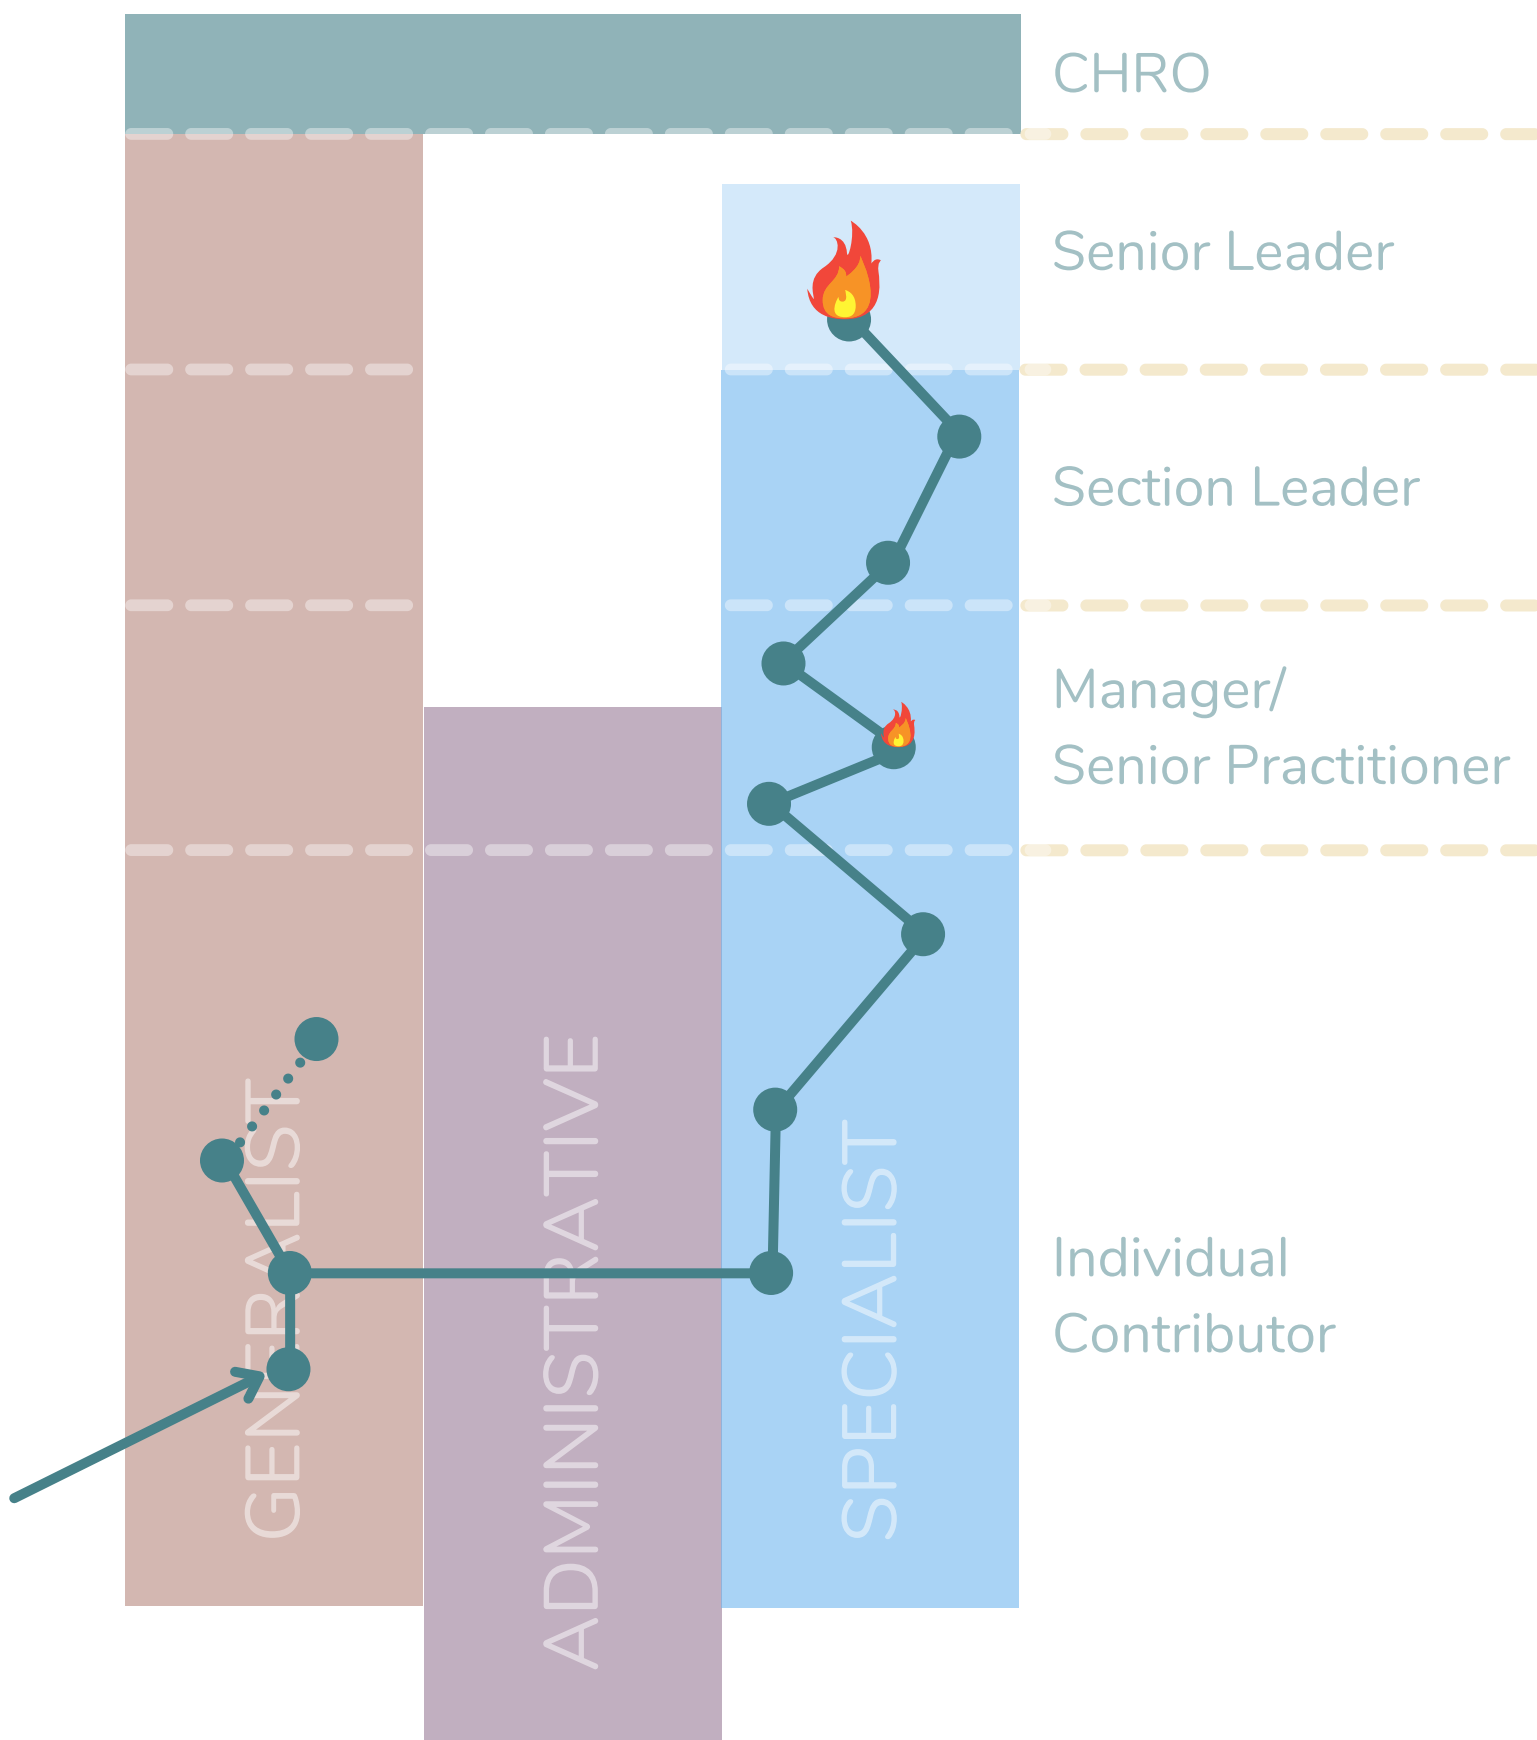

So far so good

Now, let's add some VERY predictable landmines

And, once again,
here's mine...

The second time I reached a similar landmine, I finally made the right call for me

Now, my choice is my choice...

But, even though I knew I would be making it eventually...

I didn't do much to plan for it!

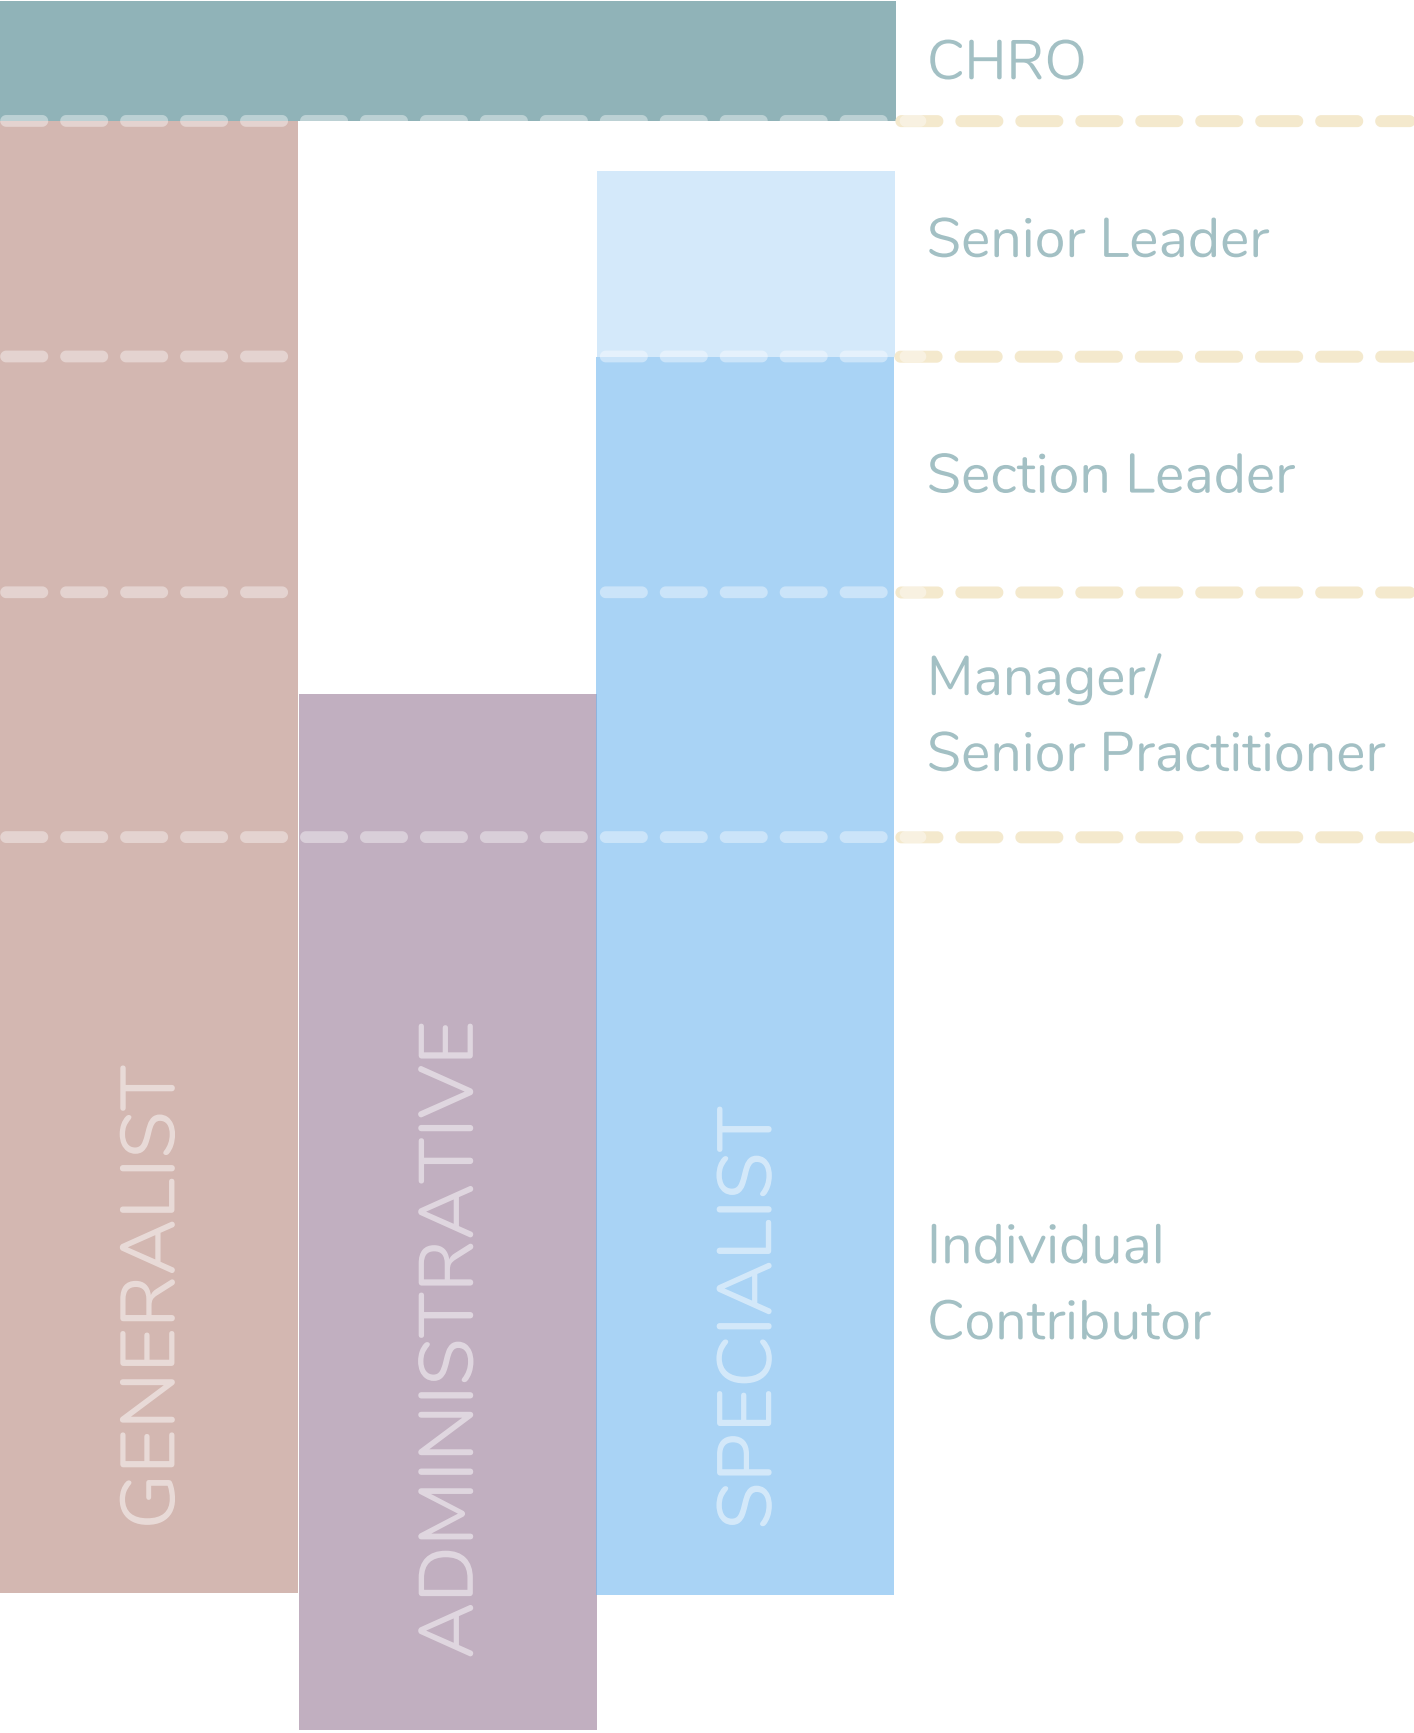

Which led me to some HARD won,
PAINFUL lessons...

The most important being...

NOW is ALWAYS the right time to take back control of your HR career, even if your big move is further down the road...

So, what does your HR career journey look like?

And what move do you need to plan for right NOW?

Want to take control of your HR career?
