

Taking control of your HR career means asking...

3

KEY

QUESTIONS

*#improving*HR

In HR, we are often driven towards a responsive/
reactive stance...

... unfortunately, this can bleed over into
our career planning

We end up focused solely on...

The NEXT Challenge

or

The NEXT Job

Without thinking
of our HR career
as our own
long-term story

Right now, you are writing that story...
Where do you want it to end?

Q1
What is my highest aspiration
for my HR career?

[Not everyone can or should be a Chief People Officer]

Right now, you are developing your character...
What experiences will shape them?

Q2
How will I learn
to do the things in my Blind Spot?

[what step back or sideways might you need to make in order to make a bigger step forward?]

Right now, what's driving your character...
and how do they do more of it?

Q3 What do I really LOVE to do?

[maybe being a well-rounded HR executive isn't for you...
maybe you're cut out to be a life-long specialist or business partner]

When it comes to shaping your HR career...

Know where you're going, and WHY

Grow in the ways that best serve YOUR progress
